

Hansel Henson Announces Partner Promotion

Leading Intellectual Property and Digital Media law firm, Hansel Henson, is pleased to announce the appointment of Justine Flockhart to partner. The promotion takes the firm's total number of partners to three.

Justine has been a solicitor with the Fitzrovia-based firm of solicitors since its inception in 2009. Justine specialises in intellectual property creation, protection and exploitation. This encompasses advising clients on what IP rights they have and how to protect them, drafting agreements to commercialise such rights, and acting on both sides of the fence in IP infringement matters.

Justine has particular expertise in trade mark filing and portfolio maintenance and management on a national and international level. Justine is also experienced in drafting and advising on pre-action correspondence, settlement negotiations and acting on cases in the High Court and IPEC on intellectual property infringement matters.

Justine's clients come from a variety of sectors including fashion, media, entertainment and creative industries.

This latest promotion demonstrates the firm's confidence in its continued growth since its formation in 2009 by founding partners David Hansel and Thomas Henson. The firm is recognised by the UK's leading directories, Chambers and the Legal 500, for its work in both Intellectual Property and Digital Media.

Commenting on the promotion, Hansel Henson's Managing Partner David Hansel, says: "Justine has been very important to the firm's organic growth and recognition as a leading boutique firm providing Intellectual Property and Digital Media expertise to a wide range of businesses both in the UK and overseas. Tom and I are delighted that Justine joins us as a partner. Onwards and upwards!".
